Regents Will Arrive Friday To Investigate Charges Made During December Strike of W. T. Studes

Windows of Trigg School House Are Shot Out Recently

The Trigg school house northwest of Canyon has been the scene of vandalism at least three times during the past year. The window lights in the building have been shot out, and damage done to the building.

Glenn Costley, one of the directors of the district, has appealed to the citizens of the community to come to the aid of the directors to put an end to the vandalism.

Windows in the building had to be replaced before the election could be held in November. The election was no sooner over than the windows were again shot out.

Damage was likewise done to the pumping station of the Amarillo water system north of the school house.

All of this damage is a useless destruction of public property and causes considerable expense to the school district and the city of Amarillo.

Two Are Killed on Highway 87 During Storm

Two persons were killed Thursday morning on highway 87, four miles north of Canyon. The car in which they were driving skidded on the icy pavement, and collided with a bus. The rear end of the Buick was cut off and the right side of the machine was stripped. The car is at the Lindsey Motor Co. and has been viewed by hundreds of Canyon people who were amazed that the other three occupants escaped with their lives.

The dead are: Marie White, 17 years old, who died in the Neblett Hospital soon after the accident, and Larry Doyle White, 4 months old baby, who was killed instantly. Surviving are Mr. and Mrs. Doyle White, Sr., of Englewood, Calif., and Claude White. Doyle White was driving. The injured were taken to an Amarillo hospital for treatment.

Funeral For Mrs. W. L. Wallace Is Held Sunday p. m.

Mrs. Myra Wallace died Friday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Leo Cooper. She was the widow of W. L. Wallace, who died several years ago. The family had lived in Canyon for 28 years. Mrs. Wallace was 79 years, 9 months and 14 days of age.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Methodist Church, conducted by Rev. Hubert Thomson.

Pall bearers were Cleve Jones, Charles Donnell, T. S. Stevenson, Grady Hazlewood, Delbert Lowes, Alvin McDonald, James Cole. Interment was in Dreamland Cemetery in charge of the Griggs-Warren Funeral Home.

Surviving are: Three daughters, Mrs. Cooper of Canyon; Mrs. G. S. Applewhite of Plainview; Mrs. Ed M. Smith of Chicago; four sons, E. S. Wallace and W. W. Wallace of Tucumcari; W. L. Wallace, Jr., of Cameron, N. M.; E. L. Wallace of Mosquero, N. M.; 12 grand children; 3 sisters and 1 brother.

Pampa Woman To Speak Here

Mrs. Raymond Harrah, president of the Seventh District of Women's Federated Clubs, will be guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Sue Hite Study Club on Monday afternoon, January 13, at 3:30 o'clock. The meeting will be held in the Fellowship Hall of the Methodist Church. Members of the Woman's Book Club and guests have been invited to join the Sue Hite Club in hearing Mrs. Harrah's discussion on "Mental Hygiene."

M. E. H. SUNDAL SCHOOL

The M. E. H. Sunday School Class of the First Baptist Church will have its monthly business and social meeting at the church on Friday, January 10. This will be an all-day meeting.

New City Clerk Is Named by Officials

FRANK B. PARKER

Frank B. Parker is the new City Clerk, who took charge of the City Hall on January 1. Mr. Parker came to Canyon from Fort Worth, but lived in Canyon last year.

Registration of Present Students Starting at W. T.

Following a practice that has been adopted by a great many other institutions, the West Texas State College will re-enroll all students who are now in residence and who expect to attend the Spring semester. Pre-registration will begin at noon, Tuesday, January 14, and will continue through the 31st. No pre-registration on February 1, 3, and 4, and final examinations will be held on the 5, 6, and 7. Specific instructions for pre-registration will be published in the Prairie on January 14.

New students will register on February 11, and Tuesday, February 18, will be the last day for change of courses and the last day a student not in the first semester may register for a full load in the second semester.

USURY'S BROTHER DIED

Dan K. Usery received a telegram Saturday telling of the death of his brother, Walter, at Princeton, Indiana. Mr. Usery was a retired railroad conductor, in his 75th year, and had been in poor health for several months.

Grady Rogers, Canyon Drug pharmacist, spent last week-end in Pampa visiting his family.

Teachers Make Statement Of Future Policy

To the Patrons and Friends of the Canyon Schools:

"There is only one way for the Texas State Teachers Association to reach success in its financial legislative program, and that is through you and your activities in your local districts," write the leaders of this association. Phases of the Association Financial Program which is of great interest to the teachers and patrons of our district are:

1. Enactment of the new equalization bill, setting a minimum salary in equalization schools of at least $2,000 and increments such that a maximum of $2,840 may be reached in 12 years.

2. Enactment of such laws and appropriation of such funds as will provide a per capita of $55, to be used by schools not receiving equalization aid to enable them to increase salaries to be in line at least with the salary provisions of the new equalization bills. The per capita now is $35 and this program would call for about $35,000,000 more than is now provided.

The Canyon Classroom Teachers Association is cooperating with our state organization. Our committees are planning a program of work whereby the people of Canyon and Randall county will be asked to support and back us in our efforts to convince our legislators of the necessity of having these measures enacted into law.

Our legislators are for our schools and are anxious to help but they want to know the will of the people back home.

The Canyon Classroom Teachers Association. Mrs. John Davis, President. Loyd Devin, Chm. Legis. Com. Mrs. Isabel Cousins, Chm. Public Relations Committee.

Mrs. Satterwhite Died Sunday, With Funeral on Tuesday

Funeral services for Mrs. Rowena Faye Satterwhite were held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Griggs chapel in Amarillo. Mrs. Satterwhite died Sunday morning in Canyon at the Neblett Hospital where she had been under medical treatment for several days. The family lived in the Umbarger community until last fall when it moved to the Stinnett-Masterson ranch north of Amarillo.

Interment was in the Panhandle Cemetery. Survivors include the husband, Leroy Satterwhite; three sons, Robert Leroy of Pampa; Raymond and Johnnie of Amarillo; three brothers, John Mooney of Kansas City, Robert and Raymond Mooney of Redondo, Calif.; a sister, Mrs. Charlotte McKee of Kansas City.

WCTU WILL NOT MEET

The Women's Christian Temperance Union will not meet on Thursday night because of the union services, but will hold its next regular meeting next month on February 13 at the Presbyterian Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Billy Jo Hunter left Monday on a business trip to Coleman.

January 15 Final Day for Bargains On Newspapers

Next Wednesday, January 15, is positively the last day for news paper Bargain Rates. Until that time The Canyon News will accept renewals to the Amarillo News for $12.45 for both papers, or $10.95 for the Amarillo News. After that date the subscription of the Amarillo News will be $12.00 per year.

The News hopes that all readers of the Canyon News who have not renewed their subscriptions to this paper will do so before next Wednesday. There has been a large response to the year-end call for subscriptions. We do not wish to cut any reader off the list, but we are forced to drop all readers who have not paid their subscriptions at expiration date.

Service Officer Makes Statement Regard '46 Work

Rhea Smith, County Service Officer, has filed his annual report for his activities in Randall county for 1946. His report shows the following activities of his office:

Veteran pension claims approved, $10,582.80. Parents and widows claims approved, $3,168.00.

Educational applications approved, $20,400.00.

This makes a total of $34,150.80 claims approved for the year.

In addition the Service officer performed the following duties:

Veterans interviewed, 722. Terminal leave forms filed, 184. Other forms filed, 112.

Letters written, 624. Veterans meetings attended, 42.

Insurance forms filed, $280,000.00.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Minor are the proud parents of a son born on January 8.

Christian Churches Launching Three Year Program

The Christian Churches throughout the nation are launching a three year "Crusade for a Christian World." Thirty-three percent increase in all the activities of the church is the goal of the meeting.

Plans for the Panhandle and South Plains area meeting in connection with the movement were made at a conference supper last Monday evening at the First Christian Church in Amarillo. Those who attended this meeting from Canyon were Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Higdon, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Root and Rev. Joseph Findley. The official opening of the movement in this area will be in the form of an all day meeting in Amarillo at which a thousand are expected at every session. This campaign throughout America is the largest ever attempted by the Disciples of Christ.

Five Churches Are Holding Union Services During Week

Union services of five churches of Canyon will continue through Friday night. The services started Monday night, with Rev. Robert W. Jones preaching at the Methodist Church.

On Tuesday night Dr. Roy L. Johnson preached at the Presbyterian Church.

The service Wednesday night was at the Baptist Church with Rev. W. J. Phelps preaching.

Rev. Hubert Thomson will preach at the Christian Church Thursday night.

The series will be closed Friday night with Rev. Joseph Findley preaching at the Assembly of God Church.

CALLED FOR FUNERAL

J. D. Barker was in Canadian Tuesday to attend the funeral of his brother-in-law, J. E. Dodd. Mr. Dodd died in California of a heart attack where he had gone a week ago for a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Duckworth and daughter Betty, of Amarillo, spent Sunday afternoon in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dan K. Usery.

Greasing the Skids?

Four Below Zero Was Registered During the Cold Wave Over Week End --- Snow Brought First Moisture

The lowest temperature of the winter hit in Canyon Friday morning when the mercury dropped to 4 degrees below zero.

The cold wave hit Wednesday when snow covered the ground all over the Southwest. The snow was dry in this section and much of it blew off of the fields. East and west roads were banked with snow drifts, making transportation almost impossible.

The snow amounted to practically four inches, and brought 22 of an inch of moisture—the first for 1947. Schools generally were postponed until Monday because of the condition of the roads, making it impossible for school busses to bring in the children.

The temperature moderated greatly Sunday, and much of the snow in the streets and roads melted.

Governor Re-named Three Regents of Teachers Colleges

Announcement was made in Austin Wednesday that Governor Coke Stevenson had reappointed the three members of the Board of Regents for Teachers Colleges whose terms expired this month.

The three are Walter Woodul of Houston, Dr. Melvin C. Eldson of Austin, and R. L. Thomas of Dallas.

The names of the three will go to the Texas Senate when it convenes later in the month.

Frank Kimbrough Is Here Looking Over West Texas

Kimbrough recently resigned as football coach at Baylor University. He was coach of the Amarillo College before going to Waco.

No statement has been issued as to his mission here, although the job of Buffalo football coach is open and many interested coaches have been asking about the job.

Local Chamber Will Hold Annual Banquet Jan. 20

The Canyon Chamber of Commerce will hold its annual banquet on January 20 at the Methodist Church. Election of officers will be held at that time.

Tickets will be on sale soon, with a limit of 250 tickets available for the banquet.

An interesting program is being worked out for the occasion.

Grand Jury Was In Session, But Passed No Bills Monday

The new grand jury was empaneled Monday by District Judge Henry S. Bishop.

The grand jury considered cases which were presented, but no indictments were voted at this session.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamil Wilson have taken their small son, Wayne Hawkins, who was stricken with polio a few weeks ago, to Hot Springs, Arkansas. They will put him in the hospital there where he will undergo further treatment.

Mrs. J. A. Edward, Jr., visited her mother, Mrs. E. A. Watson, in Floydada during Christmas holidays, and while there she became ill. She is now in the Floydada hospital following an operation.

Rainfall For '46 Lacking During Vital Periods

There was a total of 18.61 inches of rainfall in Canyon during 1946. The main difficulty was that little rain fell in the fall of 1945, which gave the wheat a late start, and the light rain during the summer months. The rainfall in the fall of 1946 has been ample to start the wheat on a fine growth, and conditions today are much more promising than a year ago. Moisture for January was brought by a foot snow, just one year ago.

The following was the moisture by months during 1946:

January	1.46
February	.30
March	.55
April	1.00
May	1.28
June	1.95
July	.60
August	2.35
September	1.35
October	6.21
November	.49
December	1.07

Bufs Taking On Tough Teams in Coming Week

The Buffalo basketball team will meet two tough teams this week in the Border Conference at Burton gym.

Arizona State of Flagstaff will be here Wednesday night and Arizona State of Tempe will be here Thursday night.

The Bufs lost to both teams in the December trip to Arizona, but by small margins. Since that time the Bufs have hit their stride and are expected to make a stronger showing against the top teams from the west part of the conference.

Hardin-Simmons will be here next Tuesday night to meet the Bufs. This will be the first meeting of the cowboys and Bufs.

Leachman Is Being Tried in County Court Death Charge

M. L. Leachman of Amarillo is being tried in county court on the charge of negligent homicide. Testimony in the case started Tuesday and from indications may continue for several days.

Leachman, a prominent Amarillo business man, is charged with the death of James P. Bolin on Nov. 3, 1945. The 17-year-old boy was hit by Leachman's car while the boy was working on his car on 36th Street in Amarillo.

A long parade of witnesses is being heard in the case. County Judge A. H. Hunt is presiding at the trial.

Two Boys Agreed to Plea of Guilt in Burglary Cases

District court was in session Wednesday for the trial of James Marion Johnson and Clifton Dale Deger, charged with burglary from the Monarch Cleaners and the City Pharmacy. The boys had agreed in advance to a plea of guilt under the indictment of the grand jury.

Judge Henry S. Bishop heard the case.

Editorials

The war is not over, but the President has decreed that hostilities have ceased. In other words, while the shooting has stopped, according to the White House, we are still in a state of war. Declaring hostilities over has made it possible for the President to beat the Republicans in killing a large number of useless Washington bureaus. While it means that the government is actually firing an army of these bureaucrats, or merely transferring them to other jobs is something for the Republicans to look into. Few Americans wonder why the President did not go on and declare the war to an end. We just read a long article on this subject, and no doubt he is technically right in holding the nation in the state of alert so long as European nations are fully armed and ready to fight at the drop of the hat. This foreign situation is so complex that a country boy has little chance of knowing all of the inner works of this vast war machinery.

We hope that Beauford Jester did not make the statement which has been attributed to him in regard to the appointment by Governor Coke Stevenson of regents of the University of Texas. Recently Jester stated that Stevenson was still governor and has the responsibility of the affairs of state. Jester is quoted as stating that new men should be appointed on the Board of Regents of the University of Texas. Coke immediately reappointed the three men who had a hand in the firing of Homer P. Rainey. There will be vacancies on many other state boards before Jester comes into office. It is the charge of the governor to fill such vacancies as they occur. While we were strong for both Stevenson and Jester when they were elected, as we see it Stevenson is completely correct, and Jester has no right to criticize Coke for any appointment. The Senate must approve all appointments, and if there is any gripe about the type of men Coke selects, the Senate will have the legal right to make a thorough investigation.

CIO continues filing suits against industrial plants for portal-to-portal pay. One plant has countered by a suit against a union for time lost on the job, by willful slow-downs and wasting the time of the company. Naturally the company has not a Chinaman's chance of collecting any such damages. The new deal labor laws see to that. At the present moment industry is over the barrel so far as the unions are concerned. Industry has no rights under the Wagner Labor Bill. If the new Republican Congress succeeds in nothing more than writing fair and equitable labor laws—fair to both labor and capital—the nation will be well repaid for the revolt against the labor dictatorial policies which have existed in the nation under the Democratic administrations of Roosevelt and Truman.

A lot of folks are sympathetic with "that man Bilbo," whether they agree with his political theories. Bilbo has been one of the staunch enemies of the forces in the nation which seek to outlaw the poll tax of the South, and allow the negroes free hand in elections. If there were more blacks and white in Randall county perhaps there would be more people openly supporting Bilbo. However, the evidence against Bilbo shows that not all of the war graft was centered around Washington. Mississippi had its share, directed by Bilbo. When the corruption of World War II is exposed, it will surpass that of World War I, in spite of the assurance given the nation by Roosevelt that this very thing would not occur again.

Van W. Stewart, publisher of the Perryton Herald, let down his hair and talked to home folks last week about his troubles of the past four years. The Herald is the largest country weekly in the Panhandle. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart have built a wonderful business by staying on the job and working about 16 hours per day. When the war ended, like all other country newspaper publishers, they thought that there would be plenty of labor—but alas, what a delusion. The News sympathizes with the Stewarts, and like them we have threatened to throw in the sponge before it was too late to enjoy life. This reconversion business is failing to turn out as reconversion, but rather a series of new headaches, coupled with a continuation of the old ones.

We see a hint from Senator Tom Connally that he may ask to be released from attendance at future world conferences. As Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee under the Democratic administrations, Connally has attended every conference, and has brought honor to himself and to his nation. He feels that it is time for him to devote more time to the affairs of Texas, which he has been forced to neglect. While Pappy O'Daniel may be looked upon as a political failure so far as Texas is concerned, we shall have to wait the decision of the voters in 1948 before counting him out of the running. Perhaps that is the reason for Connally wanting to devote more time to Texas affairs. It is evident that Connally may be serving his last term in the Senate. To elect a Junior Senator who will work with him may be the aim of the astute politician from Marlin.

We listened with great interest to the opening speech of Joe Martin after he was elected Speaker of the House in Congress. We liked his opening remarks, and his seeming sincerity in handling public questions. The question is, will the Republicans go along with him; Will the White House co-operate with the Republicans; will the pressure groups give the Republicans a chance for sound legislation? One thing is evident: The day of dictatorship in the nation has come to an end, and the White House will be obliged to seek council among the Republican leaders, or completely fail. A majority of the people of Texas expect to see a Republican elected president in 1948, provided the Republican majority takes advantage of its present opportunity. After 14 years out of power, we shall have to await the decisions of the majority party.

According to the Gallup Poll there has been a decided change in sentiment of Americans in favor of the advancement which has been made toward world peace. Regardless of the slow progress which has been made toward world unity under the United Nations, most any kind of peace is preferable to the destructive war through which we have passed. With world minded political leadership in this nation working for peace, let us hope that real progress may be reported one year hence on the work of the United Nations organization. Settling international differences is no work for a boy or for immature political leaders who do not have the capacity for international problems.

While we are proud of our profession, and believe that the newspaper game is tops, we have a resentment against so many writers who rush into print with half truths. For instance, a reporter announced that General Eisenhower was willing to run for President on the Democratic ticket if the people wanted him. The General denied the statement. Perhaps some bright reporter thought that this was a good way to check the ambitions of the over-enthusiastic Republican candidates for 1948. At any rate, such a statement may tend to check any aspirations of Congress to cut too severely the appropriations for the armed forces.

Democratic leaders are trying to induce James A. Farley to run for Vice President on the Truman ticket in 1948. Farley is a natural in such a combination. His conservative views are known to all Americans. He placed his political beliefs above his friendship for Roosevelt. Furthermore, the Democratic party cannot hope to win without the big cities. These cities slipped away from the Democrats and went republican last fall. Farley is a prominent Catholic, and the cities are strong Catholic. He would add much strength to the Democratic party, if he sees a chance to win with Truman.

This is the annual inventory time for business. Merchants are dusting off their stock and rearranging it in order to make a more attractive display. Why wouldn't it be a fine thing to take an inventory of the health of our citizens; the morals of the community; and religious and educational opportunities which are offered in our community. We have become altogether too lax in the inventory of physical, education and religious affairs, which after all are superior values to the material values of the community.

We have often wondered where firecrackers came in for the Christmas time. Who started the practice? Just where does it fit into the picture? We read with interest the denunciation of several newspapers against the practice, which call upon the law to stop the practice. Firing explosives certainly has no part in the birth of a child who was to become the Prince of Peace. Have you ever tried feeling peaceful and calm, with a sense of devotion while the giant crackers roared?

It appears to us that the next CIO demand for its members from the employers will be breakfast served in bed, a free ride to plant, and a nap in the afternoon.

BILLION DOLLARS SAVED
The virtual demise of OPA is saving the American taxpayer over $1,000,000,000 a year. That billion is the money that used to be paid out to producers as subsidies in the days of all-inclusive price control.

The subsidy was a means of providing the consumer something at less than its going market value—and then collecting the difference from him at the end of the year by adding subsidies, $560,000,000 for dairy products, and $215,000,000 for flour.

The elimination of OPA resulted in immediate price rises to offset the discontinued subsidies—the consumer again paid the full cost of what he purchased at the time of

Buffaloes Won Emporia, Kans., Tourney Friday

The Buffalo basketball team won the Emporia, Kansas, invitation tournament Friday by defeating Emporia State. The Buffs had defeated two of the major teams of the tournament to win a place in the finals.

The following comes from Emporia:

West Texas State College's basketball machine finally got all its gears to mesh Friday night and poured sweetly to an astonishing 70-31 victory over Kansas State Teachers College of Emporia in the championship game of the Emporia invitational collegiate tournament.

Despite bitter weather, a crowd of 3,500 saw the contest, played in Emporia's beautiful municipal auditorium.

The Buffaloes had lost five straight games before they came here and had only one victory to their credit, that an overtime squeak against Abilene Christian College. Despite this unimposing record, they were seeded No. 3. The two teams seeded above them, Wichita University and South Dakota Wesleyan, didn't even get to the finals.

Emporia Outclassed
Emporia never was in the game. The Buffs had a 19-9 lead after 10 minutes and were ahead 37-20 at the half. Their team play was simply superb, and Coach W. A. (Gus) Miller was a happy man.

Captain Ledru (Jake) Jacobs, veteran forward, producing one of the best performances of his career, was high scorer, cramming eight field goals and a free throw into 17 points. Otherwise it would be hard to single out a star among the consistently-good Texans, all 14 of whom saw action, though perhaps special credit might be given little J. W. Malone.

Smiley Kept Scoreless
Coach Gus Fish of the Hornets employed 16 players in a vain effort to slow down the fired-up Texas team. An excellent indication of the Buffs' brilliance on defense as well as offense is indicated by the fact that Smiley, Emporia center, who had been one of the tourney's top scorers in his previous games, was kept scoreless from the floor and had one lonely point at the finish. Two players, Campbell and M. Litchfield, bagged 22 of their 31 points.

Deac Johnson Is Eligible Border Conf. Games

The Border Conference has ruled that Deac Johnson is eligible to play in all conference games. Early in the season a protest was filed by the Texas School of Mines asking that the Border Conference officials declare Johnson ineligible for the season.

The following statement regarding eligibility was issued from El Paso, where the Border Conference meeting was held:

Border Conference representatives meeting here voted to restore the freshman eligibility rule, but followed the precedent established by other conferences in deferring application of the rule until the Fall of 1948.

The conference executive council also voted to require that each member play not less than four games against other conference members during the football season.

The council accepted the findings of Conference Commissioner E. L. Larson of the University of Arizona and declared Deac Johnson, member of the West Texas State basketball team, eligible.

Valor of the 36th Division Portrayed In Its History

"The Fighting 36th," a pictorial history of the Texas division in combat, dedicated to those fighting men of the 36th who gave their lives for their country, takes its place as one of Texas' greatest history books. Yet this first full account of the activities of Texas' own 36th division far surpasses the usual history book. In addition to a spirited narration presented in poignant style, it is replete with some of the best action news pictures to come out of World War II. It chronicles in picture and in story the trail of glory the Texas division blazed across the Continent of Europe. The remarkable story was compiled from combat records, verified by a personal check of the combat leaders and published by the 36th Division Association. An additional feature is the roster of the members of the division.

Fighting qualities of the 36th which are so vividly portrayed in this book can best be summed up by a statement made by Field Marshall Albert Kesselring, the ace German defensive specialist. Seymour Korman, Chicago Tribune war correspondent, asked Kesselring, "Tell me, Field Marshall, what do you consider the finest American division to have opposed you?" Without looking up and without a moment's hesitation, Kesselring sputtered, "Your 3rd and 36th Infantry Divisions. I've been constantly amazed by their audacity, at their long flanking tactics and the way they turned up in so many different places. I've had to pit my best troops against them."

The heritage of the 36th Division dates back to the Alamo when the 141st infantry made its sacrifice in the Texas Revolution. Composed of Texas National Guardsmen, the 36th was again mobilized into the Army of the United States on November 25, 1940, at Camp Bowie, for World War II.

Coal Miner Is Prized by Reds

Gets Best of Housing and Living Conditions Under Soviet Regulations.

KADIEVKA, UKRAINE. — The Donets basin coal miner is a valuable man in the Soviet union's economy, and the state knows it. He gets the best rations, housing, entertainment and general living conditions that his mine, backed by the Communist party organization and the government, can provide.

A group of touring foreign correspondents from Moscow met scores of miners at coal mine 3-BIS, which was described as a typical Donets basin mine. It is situated at Kadievka, 40 miles south of Voroshilovgrad.

Director Mikhail Ageev said the Germans had flooded the mine, but it had been pumped out after its recapture, in November, 1943.

Coal Production.

Coal production is expected to begin late this year, and by 1950 is expected to reach one million tons annually. Pre-war output was 600,000 tons.

A heavy-set fellow named Sergei A. Stepanovich said that he considered himself and his son, Ivan, average miners at these diggings.

Sergei, 44, is a tunnel cutter. His father was a tunnel cutter when the mine was opened in 1911. Ivan works on props which keep shafts from caving in.

A tunnel cutter's daily norm is one and a half meters. He receives 40 rubles ($5 at the diplomatic rate of exchange) daily for meeting the norm, plus bonuses for exceeding it, in an elaborate pay structure designed to give incentive under socialist competition. He works six days a week.

Mine Builds Homes.

Sergei is a member of a trade union. The union has representatives on a grievance committee.

Sergei lives in a year-old house constructed by the mine to replace houses destroyed by Germans. His wife, Ivan and a younger son live with him. The house contains a large room and a kitchen. The monthly rent is four rubles. This is practically living rent-free.

The miner does not expect his wages to remain long at their current level of about 1,000 rubles a month. Once he has returned underground, he expects to earn twice that, with payments for overfulfillment.

Ivan has lower wage prospects than his father in his job.

When Sergei reaches 55 he can retire on 70 per cent of his actual averaged earnings, including premiums. If he remains on the job he will continue to draw full pay.

Miners are exempt from taxes. If a miner agrees to leave his village, his family can continue to occupy his quarters and can keep any private livestock or other personal possessions.

Austria Takes Industries

To Help Pay Reparations

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY.—Minister of Industry Antal Ban announced the Hungarian government has assumed control by decree of the country's major industries until reparations are paid.

The Paris peace conference fixed a 300 million dollar reparations bill for Hungary.

Among industries taken over under a decree issued early this year were Manfred Weiss, manufacturers of light and heavy metal products; Rima Iron and Coal company, and the Ganz company, whose electric locomotives have been famous throughout the world.

Sealskins From Pribilofs

Lovelier Than Ever Before

WASHINGTON. — Milady's sealskins will be lovelier than ever this season because the air by-passed the Pribilofs.

Philip B. Fouke, head of the St. Louis concern which processes and sells 90 per cent of the world's sealskins, said the government's 1946 catch is "the loveliest fur ever."

The harvest this year was 64,523 skins, which will make fewer than 10,000 coats.

Last year's skins brought an average of $27 each.

Austria Closes Factories

For One Day Each Week

VIENNA, AUSTRIA.—Every factory in Austria is to be closed one day each week to save fuel. Low rainfall has caused a shortage of hydroelectric power. Further economy measures include cutting off of electricity for several hours daily to all domestic consumers and prohibition of private use of electricity for anything but lighting.

Use Seaplanes to Spearhead

Expedition in Whale Hunt

LONDON.—Seaplanes are spearheading the British whale hunting expedition in the Antarctic.

Three converted Walrus seaplanes, earmarked for whale patrol, were launched at Cowes, Isle of Wight. The British expedition consists of a factory ship, a dozen catchers and seaplanes. The latter report the position of the whales or their feeding grounds allowing the parent ship to send out catchers.

STUBBORNLY Barney Thorpe refused to leave the office or his work until the last estimate was checked and filed away. Refused in the face of the ominous warnings that blared forth from the radio at his elbow.

"Go home at once. The storm is rising to hurricane proportions. Go home at once. Quickly."

"Oh that radio," there was cool disdain in Barney's voice. "They're too nervous. Besides it'll only take a few minutes more here. Go on down like a good fellow and wait in the car for me. You know, the one behind Harry's jalopy."

Downstairs, on the street level, peering through the heavy glass door, the storm appeared worse, if that were possible.

Across the street a light, blurred and faint, showed where Harry Thorpe's cigar store stood. Harry had not gone home. Was he going to ride out the storm in his place? Or was he too just delaying?

Stubborn, old fools. All the Thorpes. Just 15 years ago Harry had proposed opening the store. He was going to put all his savings into it because he was sure it would be a grand success.

Equally positive it would be a terrible blunder Barney told him profanely not to. Warned him he was courting disaster.

Harry was stubborn, opened the store and now still had his original jalopy. Barney was stubborn, swore that his brother was a fool, and bought himself a new car every year, when there were cars. Not because he needed one but because he wanted it for a purpose.

Safe on an upper landing on the side of the building, I stopped.

And that purpose? Every day he parked that car right behind Harry's jalopy just to prove how right he, Barney, was.

A heavy hand on my arm. Not having heard a sound I jumped. It was Barney. "It looks kind of nasty," he said soberly.

Who waited for it to get nasty. I felt like retorting. We made a dash for the car and were soaked before we had gone ten feet. In the car Barney fumbled for the keys and I peered out into the storm.

"Damn!" said Barney. "I can't find my keys." He searched every pocket and then started in all over again.

At that instant I saw Harry sloshing toward us. Barney gave no sign that he saw him. But he did crawl over me to get out. He went out one door even as the door on the opposite side was opened. Whether by design or not they just missed each other. I looked at Harry and my irritation boiled over.

"You're both fools," I said angrily. "Why don't you break down and talk to each other. I'd like to break your necks."

To Harry's credit it must be said that he looked kind of foolish. He dropped some keys on the car seat. He was soaked.

"Mine," he said. "I thought he was stuck. Tell him he can have my car. I'm staying."

Barney reappeared. He looked as if he had fallen into the Sound with his clothes on. He saw the keys. "Whose are they?" he demanded suspiciously. "Harry's," I told him. "He said to use his car."

With a face as black as the storm Barney grabbed the keys and sloshed off into the wind and rain. He went straight for Harry's store. I could see him as he opened the door. Then he closed it and came back.

"I swung 'em in his face," he growled, "he'd better mind his own business."

Then I saw it. A great wall of water rolling along the street. Straight toward us. It looked as black as ink and as terrible as night.

At such a moment one does not know what one does. One acts from instinct. And what one does is beyond all reasoning. The next thing I knew I was leaping madly up the fire escape with the water swirling about my legs.

Safe on an upper landing on the side of the building I stopped. A river of water churned about below me. Across the street the light in the cigar store still shone. The driving rain blurred my vision. But not entirely. I could see into the store and what I saw was forever after seared into my mind. A living, lightning-flash picture.

Inside that cigar store were two men, shoulder to shoulder, struggling desperately to keep the door closed. Barney and Harry Thorpe. Brothers.

Then the lights went out.

Army Hits Snag In Camp Closing

Local Opposition Makes Process Tough; Much Added to Surplus.

WASHINGTON. — The war department disclosed recently that more than half of the dwindling army's wartime domestic establishments have been declared surplus or have been placed in standby status since V-J Day, but the process is lagging now because of local opposition.

From a peak of 2,075, the number of active posts of all kinds, including flying fields, has been cut to 827.

More are marked for closing. But chambers of commerce and other local interests tend to build up strong resistance to any proposals to shut off local military payrolls, and they have the support of their congressmen in many instances.

Such local opposition helped defeat efforts to dispose of 50 small, scattered posts, many dating from the days of Indian warfare, which were listed for the scrapheap by Gen. Douglas MacArthur when he was chief of staff.

Consult Congressmen.

Congressmen whose areas are affected normally are consulted in advance. Thus officials indicated privately that Chairman Thomas (Dem., Utah), of the senate military committee, has been advised that the department would like to see long-established Fort Douglas, at Salt Lake City, put to some non-military use.

War department policy is to "concentrate the postwar active army on a small number of installations where the best facilities are available." Lt. Gen. Leroy Jutes of the general staff told congress this would increase efficiency, reduce costs and save manpower in the period when the combined strength of land and air forces is being trimmed down within the current year from 1,550,000 to 1,070,000 men.

Posts thus far disposed of include sprawling temporary camps in isolated areas, hospitals turned over to Veterans' administration, and emergency munitions plants and depots.

Await Decisions.

Some 44 are currently on a "temporarily inactive" list pending decisions whether they will be needed for the national guard, organized reserve units, or will be required in the plan to give six months' military training to a million men a year which the army and navy propose to press at the next session of congress.

At the wartime peak there were 315 posts, camps and stations used by the ground and service forces, 1,290 air force installations of all kinds, and some 170 industrial plants under war department control.

Biggest reduction has been to declare 488 complete installations surplus, along with portions of 261 others. Of these, war assets administration has taken over 126 complete establishments and portions of 89.

Sweden Is Troubled With Housing Shortage, Too

STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN. — The capital of Sweden, like so many other places in the world, has more people than it has places to put them.

This particularly is true of hotels, trains, passenger ships and transatlantic airplanes.

One of Stockholm's papers had a picture of an old resident of the Grand hotel sleeping on a cot in an auxiliary eating room. A visiting Canadian, with his wife and grown son and daughter, occupied one room until his plane left for London.

Sweden is enjoying a terrific economic boom. Her factories are working full speed. There is no unemployment. The new credit to Russia promises even more work.

Labor is getting restive and there is talk in many quarters of demands for wage increases.

Russians Ordered Home In Registration Cases

NEW YORK. — Six Russians, ordered home by their government when the department of justice asked them to register as agents of a foreign power, left by plane for Paris after expressing official regret over having to cut their visit short.

Pavel Fedosimov, Soviet vice consul at New York, said the six Russians, among them three members of the supreme council of the U. S. S. R. were "not very happy about having to leave."

Five Ukrainians, also asked by the department of justice to register, left by plane en route home.

Clothing Quota Cut

By Armed Services

WASHINGTON. — The armed services are taking less clothing for resale in post exchanges and ship stores for the final quarter of this year, the civilian production administration reported recently.

The agency said that the army quota for poplin shirts had been reduced to 47,000 for the October-December period compared with 205,866 in the second quarter.

The King Trout

By M. CHRISTOPHER
WNU Features.

HE HELD the black, slender fish-pole in his left hand and the minnow pail in the other, and walked down the narrow path through the woods.

That was much the same. But that was only half. His dad wasn't tagging behind like he used to.

He swallowed a couple of times and tried to face this new situation bravely, challengingly. It was awful lonely. Every little noise was a magnified sound to his young, alert ears.

A partridge leaped up with a loud flutter of feathers from a dead, dried-up bush a few feet beside him, frightening him for an instant and he remembered the time he had shot his first grouse. Dad had been with him then. A cotton-tail scurried noiselessly across the path in front of him. Then suddenly ahead loomed the huge, oak-tree trunk, the marker that indicated the creek was near; and presently he could hear it, a soft, broken sound like distant thunder.

It was the trout he was after. The King, his dad had called it. That huge, green, orange-speckled fellow that was the biggest ever seen in the creek. His dad had caught it when he was on furlough several months ago, just before he was to be shipped overseas. He had held it out of the water for an instant while it thrashed and writhed at the end of the line, then lost it.

It had been his last furlough day, and he had to depart that night for camp. But he'd said: "Don't worry,

He remembered the time he had shot his first grouse. Dad had been with him then.

Kim," with a persevering grin on his lips, "I'll be back one of these days, and I'll get the King. You wait and see."

Now, that he wasn't coming back any more, Kim had decided he'd get the trout himself. He'd get it for his dad.

Time crawled, and the leaf shadows on the shore moved outward into the creek, where it lost its shape in the rippling unstill water.

He laid his pole on the side and unwrapped the sandwiches his mother had prepared for him.

He remembered the pitiful expression she had on her lonely, oval face, in her big, gold-rimmed eyes that burned so much with tears when she had gotten the news.

He picked up his pole, baited it with a fresh chub, and tried again. An hour and a half went by, and suddenly he felt a tug at the end of his line. He tensed, every muscle in his young, husky body straining, his fingers individual vises gripped around the cork handle of the pole.

He jerked up on the pole. The middle bent into the shape of a scimitar, and the line tautened and quivered. He pulled harder. The line knifed through the water, then suddenly snapped out — empty!

"Missed him!" Kim exclaimed bitterly. His lips pursed, and he tightened his teeth. "But I'll get 'im! I gotta get 'im!"

The King had taken the minnow. Kim rebaited the hook, cast the line out again. He waited.

Then suddenly, he felt that pull! It was strong—very strong. He jerked up on the pole. It curved sharply. The King Trout!

His heart swelled. A smile beamed on his face. He swung the pole up vertically and caught the flogging trout in his small, strong hand. He carried it back from the water and pulled the hook, with the chub-bait still on it, out of its big, round mouth.

And then—just then—he thought of his dad. Something queer came over him, a strange, peculiar feeling. He stared at the fish, and, as if from a distance, his father's words came to him, "Don't worry, Kim. I'll be back one of these days, and I'll get the King. You wait and see."

Wait and see! The words struck him, now, and he began to see things in a different light. He felt ashamed of himself, as if he had taken something that did not rightfully belong to him. And suddenly he knew that was it. The King did not belong to him.

Quietly, and unrestrainedly, he lifted the King high, and tossed it back into the creek.

Calmly, he picked up his fish-pole and minnow pail, and started up the bank for home.

Miss Polly Winstead left Sunday to return to Hot Springs, New Mexico where she is teaching school.

Miss Erdman Told Rotary Club of Her Trip to New York

Miss Loula Grace Erdman, who was awarded the $10,000 prize for the best novel for 1946 recently in New York, spoke at the Rotary Club luncheon Tuesday. She told of the high lights of her experiences when she went to New York to receive the prize checks.

Miss Erdman told of her meeting with publishers at the Harvard Club, which is one of the best known clubs of the city.

Her press conference, with a large group of New York City reporters and association representatives, was humorously described, as the reporters and photographers pried her with questions regarding her life, her work and her new book which will be released next September. Her most surprising statement to the reporters was that she would continue her profession as a teacher.

Miss Erdman advised those who go to New York for the first time "to be and act yourself."

The Town Meeting of the Air was one of the most impressive experiences of the trip. The coal strike was on at that time. Broadway is a most dismal place when it is blacked out. In that meeting fear was on the faces of all in the hall, fear of what might happen to America.

At a luncheon held at the Waldorf, Miss Erdman sat by Henry Wallace, who seemed to be in a bad humor. She was told that there was a conservative trend in the nation today. The trend is shown in the new pictures and in literature.

She was questioned on every hand about Texas. Texas appeals to New Yorkers; there is something fascinating about the state. She was glad to meet Annie Laurie Williams, who is Mrs. Maurice Crain, daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Crain of Canyon. She has handled many of the movie rights of successful books. When Miss Erdman requested that Miss Williams be given the contract to handle the moving picture rights, her publisher granted the request.

Allan Farlow was given a pin for his perfect attendance record of 18 years, since the Canyon Rotary Club was founded.

Visitors were: Chas. Green, Dr. Harvey Latson, C. R. Janak, Burton Elliott, M. S. Johnson, Forrest Barnes, Max K. Watson, Van H. Allm, C. T. Crowe, Walter M. Craig, Arch Hunsley, all of Amarillo; Harold E. Shahan, W. T. Hazlewood, Roland Black, all of Canyon.

Stockholders of Canyon City Club Will Meet Monday

Stockholders of the Canyon City Club will meet Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the city hall for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year.

The club has been inactive during the war due to the hardship in keeping the golf course. Directors will discuss the possibilities of renewing an active program for the future.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Walters of Pampa were holiday visitors here and in Knox City.

Perhaps Eisenhower would make a good President at that. By now he should be able to take such things as civic celebrations in stride, and any ex-soldier will argue that for him government red tape would be as nothing.

ABOUT THE WATER CONSERVATION QUESTION:

Because of erroneous information being spread throughout the High Plains area that the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce and the Lubbock City Commission are in favor of legislation to regulate the drilling of wells and pumping of water in the region, the two groups held a joint meeting Friday, January 3, in the City Commission room to discuss the problem.

It was unanimously stated that neither the Chamber of Commerce nor the City Commission had ever agreed to back any such legislation and the following joint statement was issued by C. A. Bestwick, Mayor of Lubbock, and Roy Furr, President of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce.

"The Lubbock City Commission and the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce have not advocated, proposed, approved or endorsed any legislation, rules or regulations in regard to protecting, controlling or allocating underground water.

"The two organizations are opposed to any legislative proposals until the people of this area have the opportunity to thoroughly study them.

"Both groups do advocate and propose a thorough study of the underground water resources of the area and ask the cooperation of all the citizens of this section in helping to put into effect protective measures if the study indicates they are needed."

The two groups voted to meet at the request of the High Plains Water Use and Conservation Association with directors of that organization, January 10. A number of similar meetings are planned with other interested groups to thoroughly inform them of the position of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce and the Lubbock City Commission.

'Wings for All' Aim Of New Army School

Six Training Units Are Ordered To Be Changed.

WASHINGTON. — Reorganization of six army schools was ordered by the war department in a move toward eventually giving wings to the infantry and all other ground forces.

The order, issued by General Devers, ground forces commander, make the air borne school subordinate to the infantry school. Both are at Fort Benning, Ga.

An announcement said "plans call for all ground units eventually to be air transportable and the integration of the two schools under one head should make future activities more efficient."

Other schools to be reorganized include the coast artillery school, Fort Winfield Scott, Calif.; anti-aircraft, Fort Bliss, Texas; air training, Fort Sill, Okla., and the cavalry and intelligence schools, both at Fort Riley, Kans.

In each case the order involves shifting headquarters activities to another school which the war department said would effect material savings in overhead and administrative personnel.

The field artillery school will be redesignated the artillery school. It will have a sea coast branch—at Fort Winfield Scott and an anti-aircraft and guided missiles branch at Fort Bliss.

Activities of the air training school will be turned over to a newly created air training department of the artillery school which will administer ground forces pilot training as well as training of air mechanics.

From Fort Riley, functions of the cavalry school not involving animals will be transferred to the armored school at Fort Knox, Ky.

Man With Gun Chase Has Surprise Ending

KANKAKEE, ILL.—Two state police squad cars and one from the Kankakee police department threw up a barrier on a highway and closed in on four men. The chase followed a report from a nearby community that one of the four men was carrying a gun.

The investigating police halted the car and found the man had a gun. But they discovered it was all right. He was a Springfield, Ill., detective going to Chicago for a convention.

Army Plans on Recruiting 5,000 Disabled War Vets

WASHINGTON. — The army announced it will recruit 5,000 partly disabled veterans and offer them a career.

The army said men who have an honorable discharge and received their wounds in honorable service will be eligible for re-enlistment, to serve in jobs that will free physically able soldiers for more strenuous duty.

Positions open to partially disabled veterans include that of Diesel and automobile mechanic clerk, postal clerk, dental technician, draftsman, electrician, machinist, motion-picture projectionist, sign painter, shoe repairman, stenographer, tailor, teletype operator and many other semi-skilled jobs.

British Vessel Sails to Pick Up Some Whale Meat

SOUTHAMPTON, ENGLAND.—British scientists believe whale meat may turn out to be a satisfactory substitute for beef to ease meat shortages.

The Balaena, a 15,000-ton whaling ship equipped with radar-directed harpoons, sailed for the Antarctic to find out whether roast whale can be eaten with relish by humans.

$100,000 for Earrings Paid At Auction Sale in London

LONDON. — Lady Ludlow's earrings brought $100,000. Lady Ludlow, whose first husband was an African diamond mine operator, died in 1945. The earrings, made up with two pear shaped diamonds weighing 17 carats each, were sold at auction to an unidentified buyer along with $381,000 more of her diamonds.

Protection for Earthquake; Buildings Put on Skates

NEW YORK.—A method of putting buildings on roller skates so they can glide in protection against earthquakes was announced.

The "skates," a special type of roller bearing assemblies, will allow a building to roll six inches in any direction to cushion the shock of an earthquake.

Ceiling Price on Fancy Cloth Is Abolished by the OPA

WASHINGTON. — Price controls are gone from metallic cloth lame—the stuff that makes evening dresses glitter, hats dazzle and blouses sparkle. Classing the material as a luxury "chiefly because the tarnishing quality of the metal threads give it short life," OPA said its decontrol action applied to all such cloth containing at least 25 percent of the metallic yarn. Its use for decorative purposes is general.

Well, anyway, let's hope the 80th Congress won't have a coalition strike.

To a Man's Heart

By LILA LENNON

WNU Features.

ELLEN CRAIG'S mood was indigo. There was, however, no hint of it in her voice as she brought her broadcast to a smooth finish. Today, though, it was just a little difficult to tell thousands of women that the best way to a man's heart was still, and always would be, through his stomach.

The reason for Ellen's mood involved tall red-headed Tim Blair and a cherished dream of long standing. It was funny how the same old dream kept popping up. Same dream, same scene. And always Tim whispering tenderly.

"Ellen, I adore you. Will you marry me?"

And today, just before broadcast time, that dream had exploded like a gaily colored soap bubble. All because Tim had asked her to marry him . . . but how!

Johnny O'Neil, Tim and Ellen had been standing in the hall . . . Johnny had laid his hand on Tim's shoulder.

"Now here's a gal you should marry, Tim." He glanced at Ellen mischievously, and continued gaily.

"She's beautiful . . . she's clever . . . and how she can cook! All those wonderful things she talks about every day . . . just think, Tim, all this . . . and good food too!"

Johnny thought it was wonderful. He shouted with laughter. When he had gone, his laughter still echoed tauntingly in Ellen's ears. It had all been so casual . . . her beautiful moment, shattered beyond repair. . . .

"Darling," she fibbed bravely, "I'm not really much of a cook." . . . Suddenly her eyes filled with tears.

She turned to Tim. It was almost broadcast time, and she had a horror of letting him see the tears she could feel stinging her eyelids.

"Good joke, wasn't it?" she asked lightly.

Tim took her arm. "It wasn't a joke," he said gravely. "I meant it, Ellen. Will you marry me?"

Ellen looked up. What she saw in his eyes made her heart do a double flip-flop. Stubbly, she kept her tone light.

"Really, Tim, I think you should sample my cooking before you decide. Won't you come up tonight, for a snack?"

It was almost seven, and Ellen grimly surveyed the contents on the stove. This was going to be a snack . . . to end all snacks! She stirred the saucepans viciously. Suddenly the sharp peal of the doorbell disturbed her contemplation.

Ellen cast a last glance in the full length mirror. She was if nothing else, a portrait of a blushing bride-to-be.

Tim kissed her, thoroughly, and still swaying a little Ellen led him to the table quickly.

"Sit down, darling, things are all ready to go on the table."

He protested. "I didn't want you to go to a lot of work!"

Ellen set a plate of leaden looking biscuits before him.

"It isn't much of a snack, darling," she apologized sweetly. "But, I was delayed, and this was all I could manage."

Tim swallowed manfully. His voice had a tinny sound, even to his own ears: "This is fine!"

"Have a biscuit, Tim?" Ellen asked.

"Darling," she fibbed bravely. "I'm not really much of a cook . . . those wonderful recipes I talked about every day . . . I . . . well, I just talk about them." Suddenly, her eyes filled with tears and her voice wobbled uncertainly.

Tim stood up. "Come here!" he commanded.

Ellen went meekly, straight into his arms.

"Don't cry, baby," Tim said soothingly. "We'll . . . we'll learn together. . . ."

Ellen sobbed convincingly. "But I can't darn socks either. . . ."

"Who cares about socks?" Tim demanded. "When the holes get too big, throw 'em out!"

Ellen looked up searchingly. Tim's eyes were very blue, and tender. He tightened his arms, and said softly,

"Darling, it's you I adore . . . and you I want. Don't you know that?"

"Yes," Ellen whispered happily. "Yes, I know . . . now!" and she hoped she would never have to mess up another meal, even to find the way to a man's heart.

What in the world has happened to rhubarb? I just happened to remember that I can't remember when I've seen any, it's been so long. And gooseberries? Don't tell me that the poor, starving Yugoslavians just must have American rhubarb and gooseberries!

A man was making a political speech when someone hissed. The speaker said, "There are just three things that hiss; a goose, a snake and a fool. Come forward and be identified."

Randy Moore, former big league baseball star, is at the head of a big industry at Omaha, Texas—a nursery. He has 500 acres in peaches and some of the trees are over 25 years old. He says a peach tree will live forever if proper care is taken so that new limbs will grow.

Moore goes in for terracing, fertilizer and chemicals to combat insects and plant disease. Last season, as an experiment, he planted a valley in lespedeza and produced 8,000 bales of hay.

He is fond of fishing and has a lake on the place and is building a clubhouse and boathouse.

The new Governor and the new Lieutenant Governor ran on almost identical platforms:

Redistricting;
A square deal for veterans;
Improved farm-to-market roads;
Full payment of pensions;

Begin Study of Atom in Spring

Huge Army Site Now Being Prepared; Nine Colleges Will Participate.

NEW YORK. — The 3,700-acre site of Camp Upton, where thousands of men were received into the army to fight in two world wars, has been transferred to the war department's Manhattan district and now is being transformed into a vast experimental laboratory where scientists will study the effects of atomic energy for the peaceful pursuits of biology, medicine, power and metallurgy.

Actual research work at the project, newly named the Brookhaven National Laboratory after the township in which it is located, will get underway "to some extent" in the spring, it was reported by Dr. Philip M. Morse, director. It is expected that the laboratory will be operating "full blast" by next fall with a staff of possibly 1,000 technical and non-technical workers.

Scientists from several universities will conduct their experiments on a scale that cannot be duplicated with the facilities normally available in any individual school.

Financing Cared For.

No equipment has been assembled as yet at Brookhaven, but plans call for the construction of a first chain reactor pile for the production of radioactive materials and the generation of neutrons, building a "small" cyclotron capable of generating from 20 million to 30 million volts, and possibly a large cyclotron with a 500 million volt capacity.

This and other construction work at the laboratory will be financed through an initial governmental appropriation of five million dollars under a contract that has not yet been signed.

One of the major problems faced by the scientific staff is housing. According to present plans, the staff will live in the reservation "for a year or two" until the housing shortage lessens.

The large non-technical staff will present no such problem, it was explained, because it will be recruited from neighboring towns.

Objectives Outlined.

Explaining general aims of the laboratory, which are "to conduct studies, experiments, investigations and tests in the field of atomic and related sciences and to train personnel in those fields," Dr. Morse declared that the implications of nuclear research might be more important in 10 years in the biological field than in physics.

Immediate objectives of the research in biology and medicine, he said, would be production and use of isotopes as tracers and to discover the effects of neutrons on organisms. In engineering "the big problem is atomic power." He indicated that another chain reactor pile might be built "in several years" to be devoted to the power problem. Dr. Morse declared that no experiments of a military nature would be conducted. "There will be no dangerous experiments," he added.

As soon as the necessary equipment is assembled at Brookhaven, the research work will be started on three levels. Permanent staff members of the laboratory will carry on fundamental research.

Income of U. S. for 1947

Put at $175,000,000,000

WASHINGTON.—Bureau of agricultural economics predicted that the national income will climb to a record peak of 175 billion dollars in 1947 but start tapering off toward the end of the year.

Such an income would be about six per cent above this year's estimated 165 billion dollars, the highest on record to date.

The bureau's 1947 estimates were in a report prepared for the agriculture department's outlook conference of farm officials. The bureau said a high level of domestic industrial activity and relatively full employment during most of 1947 will contribute substantially to higher consumer incomes.

It said industrial production, as measured by the Federal Reserve board index, may average as much as 10 per cent higher than this year and close to 85 per cent above the 1935-39 average. This prediction was hedged with the provision that production is not retarded by major labor-management disputes.

The bureau looks, however, for somewhat of a decline in industrial production during the latter part of the year, as a backlog of consumer demand for industrial products becomes more nearly satisfied. Such a downturn in production would be reflected in lower incomes of workers in affected industries.

All but Essential Work

On Ships Halted by Navy

WASHINGTON. — The navy has halted all alterations to its ships except "essential work," as part of the economy program arising from budget cuts.

An order to all navy yards from the bureau of ships directed that alterations — which were defined as changes in the characteristics of a vessel — must stop unless they affect immediate safety of the ship undergoing yard repairs.

Moth in Bare Feet

By WALLACE H. CLAY
WNU Features.

IT WASN'T a very bad morning—after, as mornings-after go. The little housekeeping noises from downstairs didn't jar particularly. And Ben Wilson felt that he might even go for some eggs and bacon—if there was any bacon. He smiled luxuriously at the thought of his five day work week with its six-day take-home pay.

Coffee . . . that was what he had been looking for last night at the party. He shouldn't have gone along with the boys after the foremen's meeting was over; but, well, . . . He began to backtrack through the evening in lazy, semi-wakeful stages. Something bright, he remembered, like a flame. Something about cinders; not in his eye—or were they. . . .

Well, of course! Harry's cousin, the unattached red-head that took the place over the moment she arrived. That suggested the analogy: the way that the gang crowded around her like a pack of moths.

Harry had left early—something about a fishing trip—but Lucinda had said that she was a big girl now and that she was going to stay. Ben remembered kidding her about her name, calling her "Cindah," which, he explained with great elaboration, was cinder with a Boston accent. He thought that was very clever—last night. Finally he got around to wondering who had taken her home. He remembered vaguely some sort of election, but he couldn't put his finger on what happened from there on out. Then he remembered his coat.

He began to backtrack through the evening in lazy, semi-wakeful stages.

His bare feet hit the floor with a splat. Why, oh why, in his cups, had he overlooked that great Truth: That no matter how perfect a woman's coiffure, the odds are heavy on it shedding at the wrong time. Trudy, his wife, was a decided brunette—there was no "out" in that direction.

The swinging door leading to the kitchen let out a creak. Trudy Wilson put on her best wifely smile. "Did I wake you up? I let you sleep late because—Ben, what's ailing you? You're green!"

The coffee was black and hot. Trudy was cheerful, almost solicitous. It just could be that there was nothing wrong after all. The thought brought him up with a jerk. He took a deep breath:

"That dark grey coat I had on last night—what happened to it? I think I left some papers in it."

"In the hall closet—no wait, dear! Finish your coffee, won't you. You're not going anywhere looking like that!" Trudy half rose, but Ben shoved back his chair and barged out of the room.

He groped for the light switch. The coat was in plain view and a quick once-over afforded no trace of strawberry blonde hair or any other signs of the previous evening's foray.

He was just turning to make a gallant return to the kitchen when a peculiar scent touched his nostrils.

The newly acquired strength trickled down into his bare toes and disappeared into the equally bare floor. Perfume! The coat was reeking with the stuff!

Gently Trudy took the coat from his damp fingers. Hesitantly, she held the shoulder of it under his nose.

"You smell that?" she asked simply.

"How could I miss?" he breathed. "Now don't get mad, Ben." Trudy Wilson stopped her husband with a tiptoe kiss. "It's nothing that the cleaners can't remove, if you'll just wait. I spilled the whole bottle of that new smelly moth repellent when I was trying to put a few drops on the light bulb up there."

"You know," she added defensively, "moths go crazy around a light—or a flame, Ben!"

"Hush, child, and let me kiss you," Ben said a moment later. "I don't know how your moths can even stand to get near that stuff; it's potent!"

"I hope so," murmured Trudy. "There's a big one around here somewhere that I really wanted to get."

"Was a big one," corrected her husband, and as she looked up quizzically, he added, "He's been singed, seared and purified—you won't have any more trouble from him. You know, out like a light—or a flame."

Labor leaders partly blame high prices for the current storm of back pay suits. Any old portal in a storm, they argue.

Nobody has more trouble with the housing situation than United Nations, except maybe American veterans.

Sees Adobe as Help
In House Shortage*Former Editor Sees Its Value
As Building Material.

WASHINGTON.—With the acute housing shortage reaching a disastrous stage the past year, preventing many young couples from marrying for lack of a home and causing thousands of others to double up with their families in a small and overcrowded household, methods of alleviating the condition are constantly being expounded by those needing homes themselves or possessing a sincere desire to help others obtain housing.

A new suggestion along these lines has been proffered by a 71-year-old gentleman living in this city. With wood and other building materials so scarce, why not use adobe?

Adobe is mud or clay which has been moulded into bricks and dried by the sun and air. It has long been associated with Indians and Mexicans in the building of their huts and, therefore, scorned by modern architects. Actually, however, adobe differs from our own bricks only in respect to the quality clay used and the method of hardening. Our bricks are dried by means of heated kilns and are more durable.

In 1938, M. J. Blanke and his wife vacationed in California where they saw many attractive homes, cottages, tourist cabins and shops made of adobe, bitudobe and cernadobe. When the need for building materials became formidable last spring, Blanke remembered the California adobe cottages he had seen and decided that here, indeed, was an ideal way to overcome the obstacles confronting those who wished to build.

He had recently sold his newspaper and, with time on his hands, he spent long and determined hours in the Library of Congress and other governmental agencies. He wrote hundreds of letters to every source available to obtain material regarding the use of adobe and soon accumulated a vast assortment of reliable data from various parts of the United States.

It proved conclusively to him that here was the best solution to a home at this time. Here was one way for veterans and others to build, or have built, homes for their families without delay and, better yet, build them "dirt cheap," so to speak.

A reference source list was compiled, printed and offered for sale.

'For a Buck a Throw'
Students 'Let It Grow'

LAFAYETTE, IND. — Several thousand Purdue university students, sworn to the pledge, "For a buck a throw, let it grow," were withholding the buck while lengthening locks crept down their necks and around their ears. Embattled barbers, who recently raised the price of haircuts from 75 cents to $1, charged that the students had employed strong arm tactics to enforce a boycott of their shops, but university officials denied the charge.

Chemical Reich Developed Is Substitute for Soap

PHILADELPHIA.—Scientists have learned how to make an efficient substitute for soap out of a paraffin hydrocarbonate extracted from crude oil treated with sulphur dioxide and chlorine.

Dr. Chester M. Suter, associate director of Sterling-Winthrop Research Institute, told the Philadelphia section of American Chemical society about the new soap substitute at a meeting in Franklin Institute.

Citing a substance called "Mersol," Dr. Suter said it was developed by the Germans during the war to produce a substitute for soap and synthetic cleansing agents of other types which were scarce.

"It was found to have excellent wetting qualities, very good foam formation, great stability in hard water and high washing power," the doctor said.

French Archeologists Find
Ancient City in Holy Land

JERUSALEM. — French archeologists have announced the discovery of traces of a city dating back possibly 5,000 years in north-central Palestine.

The site of the city, found 20 feet below the desert at three months of careful digging by the French Biblical and Archeological school under direction of Father de Vaux, is so situated that discoverers said it might be the old Israelite capital of Tirza. However, Father de Vaux cautioned against "prematurely placing importance on the discovery."

Zoo Bearburgers Find Quick Sale Among Hungry Humans

BELOIT, WIS.—The meat shortage caught up with a zoo owned by R. F. Creighton Sr.

But he had the answer—bearburgers.

Unable to find meat for his three bears and a lion, Creighton liquidated the bears. Hungry human beings, also unable to find meat, placed orders for 500 pounds of chops, steaks and bearburgers. Long lines formed when the bear meat went on sale.

Housewives no doubt think somebody deserves a pat on the back for starting butter prices on the decline. Now if the trend can just be spread.

Saturday Night

By MARION BOUCHER

WNU Features.

PATSY was worried. When one is sixteen, pert, blonde and definitely whistle bait and one hasn't a date on Saturday night, it's a serious matter. The worst of it was that she had been so sure Jim Raine meant to take her out.

When her bosom friend, Leila, boasted that she had a date for Saturday night, Patsy said mysteriously that she was going to be "busy" too. Leila had been very curious but Patsy had refused to tell her more.

On Saturday afternoon Patsy retired to the bathroom to shampoo her blonde curls. She then took a leisurely bath and emerged from the tub, scented with bath salts, bath powder and her mother's most exotic cologne.

And now it looked very much as if all Patsy's preparations had been for naught. Here it was seven o'clock and no word from Jim. Of course he worked Saturday afternoons at the corner drug store but he should be finished by now. Patsy hovered uneasily around the telephone.

When the phone rang a few minutes after seven Patsy almost broke a leg in her haste to answer. But it was only for Bob, her older brother. He talked on and on while Patsy prayed fervently that Jim wouldn't try to call while the line was busy. Finally Bob hung up but the phone did not ring again.

"Would you like to go to the movies with Dad and me?" her mother asked, apparently unaware of Patsy's anxiety.

When Jim Raine had asked her for a date, she had answered evasively. At sixteen, pert and blonde, one can afford to be evasive.

"I don't think so, mother, I don't feel like going to a show tonight." "Are you going out?" "Well . . . I might later on." "Remember to be home by twelve if you do, dear."

"Oh, mother, that Cinderella stuff in this day and age! Besides, it's Saturday night." But her mother was adamant. It was only on special occasions that Patsy was allowed to stay out later than twelve in spite of her vehement protests over this rule.

After her parents had left, Patsy went upstairs and changed into the white skirt and gay blouse. She carefully applied more lipstick and combed her hair again. She could hear Bob splashing and wistling in the bathroom, and soon he went out too. The house was maddeningly quiet—if only the phone would ring!

Patsy wandered aimlessly downstairs and turned on the radio. Dance music filled the room and then a girl's voice mocked her:

"Saturday night is the loneliest night in the week. . . . Patsy shut the radio off.

She looked anxiously at the clock—it was after eight now. What would she do all evening, if Jim didn't call? She didn't dare phone Leila—it would be too humiliating to confess that she was sitting at home doing nothing. Besides Leila had said she was going roller-skating with Davy Low.

Patsy picked up a magazine but found that she couldn't concentrate on what she was reading. She tossed it aside and went to the window. Couples strolled by, talking and laughing in the June night. It was almost more than she could bear—everyone seemed to be out having a good time, except herself.

It was really a man's world, Patsy thought bitterly. Look at her brother Bob—he didn't have to wait for anyone to ask him out. But she was a girl and had to accept her fate. Oh it wasn't fair!

Patsy was on the verge of tears when the doorbell rang. She leaped up. Could it be . . . ? Yes . . . it was Jim!

"Hi, Pat!" He was a little out of breath. "I was afraid you wouldn't be home. There was a Two-for-One Sale at the store and I had to work late this evening—couldn't get around any sooner. How about going to a show?"

"I really didn't care to go out tonight, Jim." She succeeded in sounding very indifferent. "But . . . well . . . yes, a show would be fine."

"Sorry I didn't phone you, but the boss wouldn't let me, we were so busy."

Patsy hummed a little tune as she went for her coat. All was right with the world once more: it was Saturday night and she had a date!

Warning Is Given
About Cooking Pork
—Infected Meat

Now that the winter season is here and pork and pork products are more freely used, warning against insufficient cooking of pork is given by Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer. Trichinosis is caused by a parasite in the muscles of pigs. This parasite may occur in large numbers in infested meat.

Dr. Cox explained that a disease condition known as trichinosis is caused by a microscopic organism called the trichina or muscle worm. The young worms, or larvae, are found in the muscles of infected pigs. When this meat is eaten raw or is undercooked, the unharmed larvae grow in the human intestines into adult worms which are carried by the lymphatic tissue and blood stream to the muscles where they become encysted. This period of invasion gives rise to the symptoms of the disease. The severity of the illness is dependent upon the number of trichinae originally consumed.

"While the adult parasites are in the human intestines they may cause acute diarrhea," Dr. Cox said, "which at first can be mistaken for typhoid fever or dysentery. This may start anywhere from the first to the fourth day after eating the infested pork and may last one to several days. Later a puffiness of the eyes may appear together with various degrees of pain in the muscles, particularly those of the calf of the leg, the upper arm, the shoulders and the jaws."

Dr. Cox declared that since no adequate treatment is known, prevention is very important. The worms cannot be seen by the unaided eye, so inspection of pork cannot be depended upon to protect from this type of infection. The only sure safeguard is to be certain that all pork and pork products are thoroughly cooked, whether processed at home or purchased. Many of the more serious and fatal cases have been traced to eating raw smoked sausage or raw pork pudding.

Since it has been estimated that approximately five per cent of all swine are infested with trichinae, it is being emphasized that the invariable rule before consuming any pork or pork product is to see that it is cooked until all natural color is gone and no evidence of blood can be detected. This is the only safe rule to follow, according to the State Health Officer.

CARD OF THANKS

To the many friends in Canyon, and over the Panhandle who have been so nice to write me since I have been in the hospital, and the many lovely and useful Christmas presents sent to me the past Christmas, I surely do thank each of you. Your kindness has made my stay in the hospital much easier. Geraldine Heath Sims, Room 202, Parkland Hospital, Dallas, Texas.

Farmers are advised that conditions for new farm equipment are not so favorable as we anticipated a few weeks ago.

Strikes have reduced the amount of materials available.

Therefore, fewer machines will be made than the companies had anticipated.

This simply means that farmers must keep their present machines in good repair in order to raise another record crop for 1947. You are urged to bring your equipment to our well equipped shop and have needed repair work done.

Planning to Fight Heart Disease

Educational Program Hoped to Stop Spread.

CHICAGO. — Heart disease, the greatest killer of them all, is in the spotlight. The public must know the facts about heart disease if its rapid increase is to be checked, insists the American Heart association, which has announced a nationwide program of education on the subject.

Heart disease takes an annual toll of more than half a million persons, more than the combined total of the next five leading causes of death, according to Dr. Howard F. West of Los Angeles, association president.

In addition, it is responsible for the loss of more than 100 million work days each year.

"It is essential," said Dr. West, "that the public know more about the significance of blood pressure, infections, overweight, rheumatic fever and other factors which contribute to heart disease."

Diseases of the heart and blood vessels, including cerebral hemorrhage, took 575,000 lives in 1944. Cancer took the next greatest toll, 171,000, while accidents, nephritis, pneumonia and tuberculosis followed in that order.

It is estimated that some four million persons in the United States suffer from heart disease in some form, and it was the cause of 10 per cent of rejections by selective service during the draft years.

The association's educational program will emphasize in particular work in schools and parent-teacher organizations.

Rheumatic fever, a scourge of childhood, is one of the biggest contributors to the ranks of sufferers from heart ailments, and causes more than five times as many deaths as the other major childhood diseases combined.

The information campaign will reach a climax during National Heart Week which begins next February 9 and includes St. Valentine's Day.

Citizen Gets Soaked While Watering Lawn

LARAMIE, WYO. — Rain fell in torrents, and Laramie water officials—who have been rationing consumers because of a shortage — happily watched.

One official, however, noticed a Laramie resident in the midst of the downpour calmly watering his lawn.

The man was asked to stop, since the rain would do the job for him. He refused, declaring that it was his "watering day," and that he was going to water his lawn, regardless.

France Will Offer Homes To 700,000 War Prisoners

CHICAGO. — France will offer 700,000 German prisoners the opportunity of staying in France as part of an increase-the-production campaign, Paul-Robert Prigent, Minister of Population, said.

In the United States on a tour to express thanks for relief supplies, he classified the rebuilding of the population as "one of the main problems facing France today." As a result of the war France lost 600,000 men, besides additional thousands incapacitated as prisoners, Prigent said. Although the French population level has fallen to two million below its prewar height, births this year total 950,000, compared to the birth figure of 600,000 the year before France went to war.

France is planning a 10-year immigration program aimed at getting three million new citizens. Fifty per cent of these immigrants are to be laboring men with families, Prigent said.

Silver Is Being Returned To Prewar Commercial Uses

WASHINGTON. — Government-owned silver that worked in war plants — 16,300 tons of it—is being demobilized.

The silver, in the form of slabs used by the plants as electricity conductors, will be recast into coinage ingots or commercial bars, the treasury announced. The treasury said the loss of silver from melting, oxidation or effects of acid, had been "negligible."

Since most of the 16,300 tons served as backing for currency even while conducting electricity it is valued at $1.29 an ounce, or a total of 551 million dollars.

There will still be 14,000 tons of silver out on loan for electricity conductors. That quantity was borrowed by the army for use in the atom bomb project plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Propose Tunnel 26 Miles Long Through Mountains

SACRAMENTO, CALIF.—A 26-mile toll tunnel—which probably would be the world's largest—was proposed for construction through the Tehachapi mountains in central California, between Los Angeles and Bakersfield.

The project was suggested in an engineering report to a state legislative committee seeking information on highway needs. The tunnel would eliminate traffic hazards.

Sandra's Sanatorium

By A. A. O. GILMOUR
WNU Features.

SANDRA MARLOW stood at the kitchen door and gazed in silent horror.

Prince was eating the shrimp! The afternoon had gone badly enough. The Woman's Club, duly assembled at Dr. Dick Marlow's brick cottage, was lukewarm; particularly when she tried—timidly—to discuss Granville's need—a modern sanatorium.

Perhaps with refreshments—hard come by in these days of shortages—they'd be relaxed enough to listen—to consider; perhaps to plan how funds could be raised.

She snapped her fingers. The dog buried his nose between his paws and moaned penance. She felt a quick glow of pride at his instant obedience to her signal.

Sandra forced herself to an engaging smile—and bore the heaped platter toward the women.

When the shrimp pile had dwindled to one or two morsels and the celery hearts and the olives disappeared, and when coffee steamed fragrantly in translucent Spode cups, Mrs. Burnet-Wayne leaned toward her. "I'm sorry, child," she said kindly, "but we have so many things to do. And we do have a hospital at Lumbarton—only thirty miles away—"

Sandra nodded, her face expressionless. Next year perhaps — and all the time it would take the women to get through working on their husbands. . . . She snapped her fingers twice for emphasis. "But, of course, Mrs. Burnet-Wayne!" Before Granville's social leader, Sandra's smile was submissive.

Mrs. Burnet-Wayne sipped coffee gracefully. "Next year, perhaps—besides Dr. Marlow is still so young. . . ."

She glanced about her, rose, and made her way to the kitchen. She stopped at the door. Her fingers trembled, grasping at the jamb for support. Her chest constricted in a low, shuddering moan.

Sandra stared. "It's Prince!" her voice was strangled. "I—I fed him some shrimp—before—" Her eyes closed. She gestured weakly toward the kitchen. "Look!"

Mrs. Burnet-Wayne sailed past her in full panoply. At the door she came to a full stop.

Prince was a shapeless blob on bright linoleum; his legs stiffly outstretched. His eyes were half shut. His tongue had slipped from his lax jaws. It curved, wetly limp, to the floor.

Mrs. Burnet-Wayne uttered one word. She whispered it with a hiss of quickly drawn breath—"Ptomaine!" Granville's social leader swayed like a staggering sloop.

Sandra dashed for the telephone. While she got her husband's number she issued swift orders. "Warm water. The mustard's in the cupboard, second shelf."

Finally, she heard the doctor's quick voice. "Hurry," she told him urgently, "the shrimp!"

"Eh?"

"The shrimp! Prince ate some before I served it to the club. He's—he's stretched out on the floor."

Richard Marlow's voice was incisive. "I'll be right out."

They waited. No one spoke. Mrs. Burnet-Wayne moaned faintly. Silence fell on the room. Sandra came back, her hand at her waist. She closed her eyes and said, "O—oh!"

They heard the whine then. Prince, ears cocked, eyes bright, scratched energetically at the kitchen door.

"Why—why," Mrs. Burnet-Wayne gasped, "he's alive!"

Sandra recovered her composure. "And we all thought we were sick."

Mrs. Burnet-Wayne was not to be stopped. "Suppose we had been—with no facilities for treatment. . . ."

She considered this a long moment. "Child," she said sternly, "you should have pressed the sanatorium project more forcefully. I shall handle it myself from now on . . . personally!"

The Woman's Club was adjourned when Dr. Marlow arrived. Sandra gave him a brief explanation. Prince lay worshipfully at her feet. "And so," she finished, "with the Woman's Club back of it, darling, I think Granville's going to get a sanatorium." She snapped her fingers, twice.

Obediently, Prince rolled — a shapeless blob. His legs were stiffly outstretched; his eyes half closed. Limply wet, his tongue slid from relaxed jaws to the floor.

Fruit pies give the best results in freezing. Custard pies should never be frozen.

PAY YOUR TAXES NOW

Your 1946 TAXES are now due and must be paid by the last day of January, 1947, to avoid penalty.

Both men and women are required to pay their poll tax. Unpaid poll taxes are a lien upon any real or personal property you may own, or come into possession of.

Those who were 60 years of age or more on January 1, 1946 are not required to have an exemption to vote; those who have moved into the county since January 1, 1946, are required to have an exemption; those who have become 21 years of age since January 1, 1946 or will become 21 before election are required to secure an exemption certificate during January, 1947, before they may vote in any of the elections during the year; no charge is made for these exemptions.

In 1947 automobile license fees cannot be paid before February 1st, 1947, but must be paid between February 1st, and April 1st, 1947.
